BHĀJĀ (PUNA)

Two Figures of Watchmen from the Rock Vihara.

I CENTURY B.C.

A vihara is a dwelling for monks and mostly consists of a series of cells into which access is gained through a veranda. The ideal plan consisted of a quadrangular court round which the cells were disposed. In the case of rock viharas, which frequently had several storeys, the cells were arranged in one suite.

The West Indian Viharas were Buddhistic. Bhājā belongs to the oldest constructions.

Reliefs of the Veranda of the Rock Vihara.

FIRST HALF OF THE I CENTURY B.C.

The upper relief of the West side of the veranda most probably represents the Sun god Surya with his two wives, whose four-in-hand is carried by a demon.

The contents of the second relief have not been interpreted.

Chaitya Hall and Vihara Caves.

BEGINNING OF THE I CENTURY B.C.

Chaitya was originally the designation of the stūpa which was worshipped by walking round it, and the name was subsequently applied to the Buddhistic hall enclosing such a stūpa. The rock chaityas of West India are the transformation of wooden constructions into the living rock.

Top: Cave III.

FIRST QUARTER OF THE II CENTURY A.D.

On the Eastern wall are inscriptions indicating the foundations of Śrī Śatakarni Gautamiputra, dated in the years 18 and 24 of his reign. Above the entrance are inscriptions of Śrī Pulumavi Vaśiṣṭhiputra, dated in the years 19 and 22 of his reign (cf. Senart, Ep. Ind. VIII).

Bottom: Cave X.

A.D. 120-23.

The cave is often designated as Cave VIII; and according to Senart it should bear the number X (cf. Ep. Ind. VIII, p. 78, Pl. IV/X). On the back side of the veranda there is a foundation inscription of Ushavadata, to one of his wives, a daughter of Nahapana. Donation of a cell in the year 42 of the Śākya era by Ushavadata = A.D. 120. Confirmation of the donation of the year 41 (!) in the year 45 = A.D. 123.

Āmohinī Relief.

A.D. 14

Such plates, which were erected in the Jaina temples for the adoration of the Arhats, were called ayagapata. The name of Aryavati which occurs in the inscription is perhaps the name of the goddess represented; the name of the lady patron is Āmohinī, dated in the year 72 of the Vikrama era=A.D. 14.

MATHURĀ

Statue of V'ima Kadphises.

A.D. 84.

The more than life-size work was executed, according to the inscription, in the year 6 of the Kaniška era and is a posthumous mark of honour.

The inscription, which gives only the name (in contradistinction to the statue of Kaniška, which was executed during his lifetime and gives the entire title), points in this direction, and particularly the close relationship of the form with that of the Bodhisattva statue, Plate 79, dated in the third year of Kaniška.

The prince is seated upon the lion-throne, and the drapery with its sewn-on plaquettes is very closely related to the old Central Asiatic Scythian dress.

SĀRNĀTH Bodhisattva Torso.

A.D. 78-81.

The summary treatment of the upper part of the body, and the customary folding-back of the drapery on the breast and arm, date this figure earlier than the statues of the year A.D. 81. A lion set up between the legs of the figure points to the fact that it is meant to be the "lion of the Śākya race", that is to say the historical Bodhisattva, Gautama.

MATHURĀ

The Bodhisattva of Katra.

c. A.D. 100.

The work is the only completely preserved example of a Buddhist stele. The transition from the single figure to a group seems to have taken place very soon. Clear intersection, the two companions standing distinctly in one plane; a certain effect of depth, owing to a close connection of the principal and secondary figures. Instead of the usual red sandstone of the Mathurā plastic art, a black sandstone is here employed.

MATHURĀ

A.D. 80-100.

According to the inscription, the Buddha is here represented. It is probably the oldest specimen of a seated Buddha-Bodhisattva of Mathurā, a single figure of a particularly high quality.

c. A.D. 130.

In its plastic drapery-edges this specimen follows the North-West Indian scheme more closely than the next, where the folds are engraved.

Height: 0.45 m.

Right: Buddha from Set Mahet.

c. A.D. 130.

The short and stumpy figures of the socle are closely related to the figures of the Jaina socle of the year 49 of the Kaniṣka era=A.D. 127. (Plate 87 below.) This is to be reckoned as a Buddha of the North-Western types in the Museum at Mathurā which must bear the date "year 22".

MATHURĀ

Left: Bust of a Bodhisattva.

A.D. 130-150.

In contradistinction to previous times the Bodhisattva now appears as a richly arrayed prince.

Height: 0.35 m.

Formerly in the collection of Edgar Guttmann, Munich.

A.D. 130-150

Ornamentation and dress closely follow North-West Indian prototypes, while in the conception of the body the work faithfully adheres to the indigenous tradition. The folding of the hands on the bosom, signifying meditation (dhyana mudra), developed under the influence of the North-West. Previously, the right hand was raised as though affording protection (abhaya mudra).

Buddha from Mathurā.

A.D. 142.

With regard to the designation of the statue as Bodhisattva in the inscription, cf. p. 110, note 19. The specimen is dated in the year 64 under the reign of Maharaja Trikamata (Lüders' list, No. 949). This ruler must have been a vassal of Vasudeva, the style of the statue excluding a date after the 11 Century A.D.

They live with the female demons, who reveal themselves as man-eaters. The Bodhisattva, then born as a winged horse, saves those merchants who had implored his help, while the others who had persisted in their delusion are one day devoured by the Yakṣinis.

Left: Nāga Statue from Chargaon.

Dated in the year 40 of the Kaniṣka era = A.D. 118.

Right: The so-called "Heracles with the Nemean lion".

As far as the human body is concerned, the motif goes back to the Apollo Lycaeus of the Praxiteles cycle. Helenism was fond of it, particularly when representing the drunken Dionysius leaning upon one of his companions on his left. Such a bacchic representation—we have only to remember Mathurā's predilection for such scenes—has probably served as the prototype for this group.

THE VANDERBILT

After having been in the city of New York for some time, I have been able to observe the various

Fragments of a Beam

BEGINNING OF THE II CENTURY A.D.

The fragment below has retained the inscription of foundation which in its character seems to be a little older than the inscription with the name of Śrī Pulamavi. (Cf. Burgess, Amarāvati, Plate 56/1 and 51/2.) The flower decoration, too, goes together with that of the jamb, Plate 111/left.

The violently agitated scenes, with the exception of the well-known representations of adoration, have not yet been interpreted. Notice should be taken that the lotus leaves are no longer exactly divided, and that the more deeply executed intersection lends a tension to the whole, increased and heightened by the agitation of figure and ornamentation. Particular attention is called to the panels in the corners and to the decoration of the lower closing fillet.

AMARĀVATĪ

Tondo of a Post from the Outer Railing.

MIDDLE OF THE II CENTURY A.D.

It is possible that here the meeting of Gautama with his future wife Gopa is depicted.

This period employs foreshortening and curtailing for purposes of perspective, and for the production of the illusion of space. If both here and in other reliefs the illusion is attained only conditionally, this is due not to symmetrical imperfection of the plastic elements, but rather to the unfavourable lighting. In sharp illumination from above, the defacing spots between the figures vanish, and a dark foliation appears, producing the desired effect. In comparison with Plate 125, the difference in the artistic influence is strong.

Fragment of a Frieze.

MIDDLE OF THE II CENTURY A.D.

In the motif is a miniature railing, broken up by scenic representations, adoration of the wheel, and the Sūpa, and the Dream of Maya. The elephant is placed in the concluding fillet. Here, too, a strengthening in the ornamentation is to be noticed; instead of the fluctuating motion the garlands fall down gendy.

Three Fragments.

LATTER HALF OF THE II CENTURY A.D.

The two lower fragments evidently belong to the frieze of a covering plinth. New are the griffons' heads as consoles. On the middle piece the representation of Rāhula is depicted; below Gautama is leaving the women's apartments, is riding forth on his horse; and Kanthaka, the horse, his servant Chandaka and genii, are bewailing his parting from worldly life. On the top the six Buddhas of the past are represented.

KHAṆḌAGIRI (ORISSA).

Ananta Cave. Two Door Frames.

100-50 B.C.

The viharas in the East of India were destined for Jaina monks. The most important rock verandas are found in the neighbouring hills of Khaṇḍagiri and Udayagiri in Orissa. Between the door openings and the plastic ornamentation there is not the slightest structural connection. In style the reliefs are related to Bodhi Gaya.

For the inscriptions of these cave groups, cf. R. D. Banerji, Ep. Ind. XIII, pp. 159 ff.; further, A.S.R. 1922/3, pp. 129 ff.; J.B.O.R.S. VI, p. 389.

Manchapuri Cave. Part of Frieze.

The cave has received different names from various authors: Vaikunthagabha, Vaikunthapura, Svargapura, Patalapuri. Elephants and foliage show a far-reaching relation to Sanchi.

Rānī Cave. Lower Storey. Frieze above the Entrances.

1 CENTURY A.D.

The shape of the animal capitals above the peculiar pilasters, the lowest figures and certain details, such as the tree and the rendering of the architecture (top to the left), are reminiscent of the later reliefs of Sāncī; the strong agitation of the groups points, however, to a somewhat more recent origin, which the crude workmanship should not be allowed to conceal.

Rānī Cave. Upper Storey. Pieces from the Frieze.

II CENTURY A.D.

The composition of the figures in such loose, strongly agitated groups did not become possible before the II Century. Particulars, such as the woman who is driving an animal in front of her (above), or the man who is returning from a fight (below), are strikingly mature both in theme and representation.

I TO THE II CENTURY A.D. es

The Eron of the upper picture sometimes wear the characteristic Scythian coat; the piece must also have been executed under the Kaniška reign. One should also notice the pattern of the garlands, which correspond in the left part to the garland pattern of Mathurā. While in the North-West two stamens are always turned one to the other, in India the flower coils are always carried in one direction.
